

“If you are given the opportunity to make a movie, you have a responsibility to make it good.”
Steven Soderbergh

Dear Reader,

Think of the last movie that changed your day. Take a moment, there must be one. Did you cry, laugh, love, enjoy a few explosions, or simply escape your life for a few hours? Keeping that memory in mind, have you ever wanted to be the reason a movie exists?

A movie is currently in production, and to succeed, it needs your help. The film (a suspense-drama) is accepting donations, loans, and investments. Each contribution secures a credit in the movie and access to a constantly-updated website chronicling the film.

The film has taken into account the factors that make most independent films fail and will be produced in the fashion of a high-quality, wide-release motion picture.

This letter is brief, but there is an introductory video explaining the project and extensive information on the film and the filmmaker online at www.KentonBartlett.com.

You have the opportunity to be an executive producer, benefactor, friend, sponsor or patron in the film’s credits depending on your participation. Contributions are also a great gift for a special film buff, family member, or friend in your life – put their name in the credits of a movie (certificates available upon request). Additionally, all contributors will be able to track the progress of the film online from inception to completion (currently estimated release of 2012).

Let’s make this movie together. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Kenton Bartlett
